Clinical History

This 62 year old male sustained a work related injury on ___ when he was picking up some files and experienced back pain. An MRI performed on 07/28/99 revealed stenosis and degenerative changes. The patient's symptoms were treated with epidural steroid injections in 1999 with some success. The patient is complaining of chronic back pain and the treating physician is recommending that the patient undergo epidural steroid injections and facet injections.

Requested Service(s)

Epidural steroid injections and facet injections.

Decision

It is determined that the epidural steroid injections and facet injections are medically necessary to treat this patient's condition.

Rationale/Basis for Decision

This patient is not experiencing radicular or neurological changes and the most appropriate treatment would be conservative care. The patient is able to work with the appropriate pain relief and epidural steroid injections and facet injections would offer him that relief without surgical intervention. Therefore, it is determined that the epidural steroid injections and facet injections are medically necessary to treat this patient's condition.

This decision by the IRO is deemed to be a TWCC decision and order.
