In addition, the reviewer has certified that the review was performed without bias for or against any party to this case.

Clinical History

This 64 year old male sustained a work-related injury on ___ when he was knocked down by an air compressor and sustained a closed head injury. The patient was admitted to ___ in ___ on 10/20/02 for headaches, dizziness, and nausea. CT scans performed on 10/21/02 and 10/22/02 revealed a left frontotemporal/tentorial subdural hematoma with mild left hemispheric mass effect. The patient was discharged on 10/24/02 and continues to complain of headaches, dizziness and short term memory loss. The treating physician has recommended that the patient undergo outpatient neurocognitive testing.

Requested Service(s)

Outpatient neurocognitive testing

Decision

It is determined that the outpatient neurocognitive testing is medically necessary to treat this patient's condition.

Rationale/Basis for Decision

Neurocognitive testing is a reasonable and accepted technique for assessing persistent symptoms following closed head injury such a memory loss, poor concentration, etc. The testing for this patient will allow for a more specific diagnosis and treatment plan. Therefore, the outpatient neurocognitive testing is medically necessary.

This decision by the IRO is deemed to be a TWCC decision and order.
