CLINICAL HISTORY

This patient suffered an apparent injury to the cervical region in a work-related fall while carrying plywood, and has had shoulder, neck and chest pain issues since that incident. MRI findings demonstrate cervical 3-4-disc protrusion and cervical 4-5-auto fusion. There was no reported spinal canal or neuroforaminal stenosis at any level. Cervical epidural steroid injections have been proposed with the diagnosis of bilateral shoulder impingement and cervical strain.

REQUESTED SERVICE

Cervical epidural steroid injections is requested for this patient.

DECISION

The reviewer agrees with the prior adverse determination.

BASIS FOR THE DECISION

The treating physician discusses cervical strain, bilateral shoulder impingement and occasional headaches in impressions sections of his notes. There is no specific mention of cervical radicular pathology. Nor is there discussion of cervical disc disruption. Without clear indication of cervical disc pathology and cervical radicular pain, there is not significant indication for Cervical ESI.

___ has performed an independent review solely to determine the medical necessity of the health services that are the subject of the review. ___ has made no determinations regarding benefits available under the injured employee's policy.

As an officer of ___, I certify that there is no known conflict between the reviewer, ___ and/or any officer/employee of the IRO with any person or entity that is a party to the dispute.

___ is forwarding by mail and, in the case of time sensitive matters by facsimile, a copy of this finding to the treating doctor, payor and/or URA, patient and the TWCC.
