

Judge Timothy Johnson

Judge Timothy Johnson has been recognized as one of the most innovative and productive members of the central and south Texas judiciary. He has been elected as an administrative judge seven times and has served six four year terms as judge presiding over civil and criminal trials. Consequently, Johnson's expertise has led him to earn his appointment as director of all judicial support systems for county government in the second largest city in Texas, where he had also previously worked as the assistant district attorney.

Judge Johnson currently serves in eighteen different counties in central Texas as a visiting judge that presides over the complex civil and criminal cases assigned to him. Through his trial experience, annual judicial education and community advocacy, Timothy Johnson has become thoroughly acquainted with legal and medical issues, over qualifying him to resolve such disputes in accordance with the law.
